

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. The Indiana Telephone Privacy law has improved my time at home and given me more time to spend with my foster children on uninterrupted homework and dinner time. I used to have 3-4 interruptions a night and even received calls on Sunday but they have ceased and I now know that if and when the phone rings it will be someone I or my children know. I always refused to buy from anyone who called me at home but that did not stop them. Sometimes I would receive 2-3 calls from the same vendor in one day. My personal home and phone should not be used by companies to annoy or sale me anything unless I call them. Sincerely, Jean Rondeau
